Nicholas J. Sciarrino is special counsel to Conway Farrell. He handles a wide range of matters involving personal injury, including premises liability, general liability and construction law. Nick has extensive jury trial experience and a documented record of successful verdicts.

As he has spent a considerable portion of his career in the courtroom, he brings his experience to bear in developing successful strategies in the defense of claims from the initial phases of litigation through trial, mediation or arbitration.

Nick began his career as a litigator in a national law firm. Prior to joining Conway Farrell he was a named partner in an insurance defense firm representing major carriers in cases involving significant exposure. In this capacity, he defended numerous claims involving premises liability, construction law and products liability. Nick has presented cases to Insurance Company Claims Committees which has given him an invaluable perspective into the claims process.
