Ralph focuses his practice primarily on construction accident liability matters. He is an experienced litigator representing construction contractors, property owners and managing agents, and motorists. Ralph conducts depositions, prepares witnesses for trial, represents clients in court, presents oral arguments and has been a second chair at trial all within New York State Courts.

While attending New York Law School, Ralph worked as a legal intern where he performed research on issues concerning immigration law needed for US Citizenship and Immigration Services applications. He also interned with the New York City Police Department where he received a certificate for "Outstanding Job Performance."
